Pastor Says

"SLUG IT OUT" —

This is the opinion of one well-known counselor and writer on family relations. Perhaps this is better in most cases of family trouble than closing up like a clam, refusing to face the reality of a situation. When the time arrives that neither will "talk" it is time to get concerned, for communication may be headed for the rocks.

Everybody has what psychologists call "ego". This causes most of the problems of home and family life. The ego does not like to get hurt. Therefore, it will react violently unless it has been disciplined with experience to give as well as take. It wants its way.

Some people will close up like a clam in order to avoid a quarrel — this only drives feeling and resentment and rejection deeper into the surface of personality. It will "show up" in other phases of life either consciously or unconsciously. Restraint must be exercised. Never become contentious over frivolous matters. Don't be a "crying burr". But negative acceptance never serves anything. Face up to your relationships at the first sign of the development of a rift in your family life.

There is known what is called the "flanked attack". The brusque ego can respond in kindness and love. Many times this will frustrate the spouse, and will steal the thunder in a strained relationship. Too, praise is a "builder" — Many unnecessary quarrels will be avoided when praise is exercised. Find something good, and commend your spouse for it. Then, "reconsider" of the other's lement will help. All are born with certain tempers — no two alike. Marriage is a family affair — make no mistake about that. One brings into the marriage union a whole "constellation" of factors, a whole "management" of attitudes which have developed over the years. The recognition of these by each member of the family relationship is of tremendous value to happiness and success.

The Bible, the Christian's source book, teaches the intrinsic value of each individual. Simon Peter, who was a married man and a great Christian statesman of the 1st century, gives us some words at this point. Peter says in addressing husbands . . . husbands dwell with your wives according to knowledge, giving honor to the woman as the weaker vessel, as being joint - heirs of the grace of life . . . be ye all like-minded; not giving evil for evil." I Pet. 3

There is the recognition, in these statements, the order of family life. God says man to be the head of the home, the leader and therefore more responsible. If man will assume his role, usually the woman will gladly assume hers. This "weakness" referred to of course has reference to some of the characteristics of woman. I understand that a woman's body can stand more pain and suffering than most men can stand. Associated with her role, God has endowed her for these abilities. Therefore God has said that she should be loved and cherished relatively - Given place in life.

Yes, it's all right to slug it out, but only when these principles are kept in mind. When it is done in this manner the marriage union will usually find new dimensions, and more happiness prevails. As Robert Louis Stevenson, lines, from Princes (italics), summerizes the outcome:

"The blessings on the falling out That all the more endears.

When we fall out, my wife and I, And kissed again with tears."

And Addison adds to this in his lines:

"These marriages generally abound most with love and constancy that are preceeded by a long courtship"

Perhaps this word should be a word of advice to the young lovelorns. It is better to have never entered into married life, than to fail to find happiness. You had better "slug it out" before you marry — yet I say marriage and family life is the greatest when both partners keep the channel of communication wide open.

PROGRESS THROUGH SERVICE — 1863 — 1963

A CENTURY OF COMMERCIAL BANKING

It was in 1863 that President Lincoln signed the National Currency Act. The Act provided for the issuing of a national currency and for the establishment of a system of Federally chartered banks to take their place alongside the already established system of state-chartered banks.

It didn't make big headlines at the time; but, ever since, it has had far-reaching consequences for the American economy—in other words, your pocketbook.

During the century between 1863 and 1963, this effective dual system of banking has contributed immeasurably to America's growth; and its role in the Nation's life has been constantly advancing. Our bank is proud of expanding its service to meet the growing needs of its neighbors; proud to contribute thus to progress, for America and for you; proud to share in the observance of a significant American centennial — the theme of which, appropriately, is "Progress through service."
